

Medium density fiberboard of our production

MDF is produced by a method of dry continuous hot pressing of grinded wood particles. This method allows to produce boards with a smooth surface from both sides. Urea resin, modified by melamine, is used as a binding element, what ensures low emission of formaldehyde comparable to the emission of natural wood (class of formaldehyde emission – E1, E2).

We offer MDF E1 of the following prices for m<sup>2</sup>:
